With over thirty years of tested field experience, Marc is a highly qualified and globally respected senior security advisor and consultant. His frontline leadership skills through active persistence in designing security architecture has empowered Marc to diligently and practically apply proactive safety and security awareness, methods, policy, strategy and tactics through subject matter intellectual knowledge that only hard-earned experience can provide accreditation.

Marc's proactive insight, culminating in successful operational methods of protecting soft targets has proved to save lives and protect property using the correct balance between people, procedures and technology.

After playing professional tennis for a short period, Marc thereafter served in South African Defense Force, the Israel Defense Force and thereafter an extremely successful career in the Israel National Police where he served as a detective and intelligence officer.

Marc established the Israel Tourist Police in Netanya and Tel Aviv. As a direct result of the wave of terror in Israel between the years 1999 and 2005 Marc implemented a unique program, named the "Secure Zone Concept" into the tourist and business district of Netanya, one of Israel's largest cities, immediately after the Passover terror attack at the Park hotel in 2002. This successful concept, (*now globally known as Safe City) is used successfully around the world in different formats.

In 2005, Marc became an Israel National Police Spokesperson for Israel's disengagement process, where he interacted with hundreds of journalists from all around the world. He appeared as subject matter expert for well-respected global publications and has appeared on many major International television networks such as CNN, FOX, BBC, CNBC. He has advised and consulted to the American Hollywood Production Company Spike TV for a successful documentary series produced in 2010, focusing on countering terror in soft target areas like event facilities, malls and schools.

Marc played a major role in creating and development training programs for the Israel Police Foreign Affairs Unit advising different Australian, US, UK and other Law Enforcement agencies including the FBI, the DHS, TSA, NYPD, Scotland Yard and others.

Invited regularly to lecture as a key-note speaker in major global conferences, Marc has shared his subject matter intellectual knowledge as well as trained and advised on an integrated physical-cyber security architecture from planning to policy and concepts to advanced technology.

The security architecture and planning leading up to and throughout the 2010 Soccer World Cup hosted in South Africa, the EURO 2012 soccer tournament in Poland, the African Nations Cup in South Africa and several other key events that Marc has been involved in, have all proved to be successful security operations and are witness to a prime example of Marc's Secure Zone concept at work.

Fusing Homeland Security with Intelligence and Cyber Security is the focus and prime motivation for Marc's ongoing quest to ensure the delivery of some of the worlds most advanced intelligence products and the integration thereof into overall security solutions.

Marc has independently advised and represented several key Global Fortune 500 companies since 2006 on aspects of proactively thwarting serious crime and terror.

As an investigative intelligence analyst with a background in extensive detective related work, Marc has used public domain research for investigative purposes and has achieved huge success in uncovering hidden information via the internet.

Marc was awarded a special medal of appreciation in Washington DC from former USA Congressman (Lt Col Ret) Allen West in 2012.
